Fill out this worksheet, as you watch “Application Cartography.” To make a copy of this document click here then go to File → Make a Copy.

Part 1: Warm Leads

You’re going to look at your phone contacts and make a list of every name of someone who works at a company that might have software or IT roles, and then list the name of the company afterward. Now, do the same thing with SnapChat, Whatsapp, and Instagram.

Now, do it with LinkedIn. Walk through every LinkedIn connection you have, write their name down and the company they're at (if they could in any world have IT or software roles).

Then, you're going to add to this list every extended family member or friend off the top of your head who works at any company or organization with software engineers that you didn't already add.

Ex. Your cousin, second uncle, etc.

Next, you're going to send this message to all of your close friends and family members. Anyone who you talk to more than 5x a year.

"Hey [name], I hope you're doing well! I'm reaching out because I'm looking for a software engineering internship/new software engineering job, and I was wondering if you had any friends or family members at companies that have IT or software people. If so, it would be super helpful if you could send me their contact info! I really appreciate it — thank you so much!"

Follow Up With Their Company

Parents Variation: Ask your parents in your own version or style to list off any family friends they know of who are at ANY COMPANY that might employ IT or software people.

List those here.

Whoever they add, you're going to add them to this section.

Google each and every one of these companies and append “software engineering internship/role”. Any company that indicates anywhere online that they have internships or student opportunities or full time opportunities, you’re going to bold those on your list.

If any company has current OPEN internships or entry-level jobs, then you’re doing to bold and highlight that company.

Key: Don’t bold or highlight if they only have senior roles and don’t indicate new grads/internships anywhere on their website.

Bold + highlight: Give yourself 2-4 days to get a referral (warm lead referrals are fast) + apply ASAP.

Bold: Get a referral ASAP.

Not bold or highlight — send those contacts this message:

“Hey [name], I hope you’re doing well! I’m reaching out because I’m looking for a software engineering internship/new software engineering job, and I was wondering if [insert their company name] offered any software or IT internship/job roles. Please let me know, thank you so much!”

If they say yes, then Bold and get a referral from them ASAP.

Do this after you finish the next video, however. Just keep them on this worksheet for now.

Part 2: Cold Leads

Location Hacking: First, you’re going to list out 5 locations here — cities or towns. You start with where you’re currently located, so #1 is going to be the medium-sized city or town closest to you. Where do the majority of people work?

- 3.
- 4.
- 5.

Then, pick 4 other cities/towns off the provided list.

Google Manhunt: You're going to go down the list and fill out this section of the worksheet with company names. Input each city, and you're going to fill out 10 company names that you'll find like this.

Google: city, software engineering job, internship, etc. Once you find one that looks good, you're going to note that down. Aim for 10 per city. Double check the listing is still active.

Bold the ones that have open roles.

Start with the bold/highlighted, open roles. Start with warm leads, give yourself 3 days to get a referral before applying. For the bold/highlighted cold leads, give yourself 5 days to get a referral before applying.

Caveat — if there is a deadline on the application, then do your best to get a referral but if you can't then just apply.

Then go to bold (get a referral for those), and then non bold, and get a referral for those too.

You MUST finish all the bold/highlighted options within 1 week, max. Your application has to be in to those, because you have a timer. Obviously, you need to go for a warm application which I'll explain how to do later, but even if you can't get one, still submit your application.
